India and China leading global greening effort, says NASA study

LALIT K JHA Washington, February 12

INDIA AND CHINA are leading the global greening effort, which is quite contrary to the general perception worldwide, a latest NASA study said on Monday, observing that the world is a greener place than it was 20 years ago.

The NASA study based on data retrieved and analysed from its satellite said that India and China are leading in greening on land.

"China and India account for one-third of the greening but contain only 9% of the planet's land area covered in vegetation," said lead author Chi Chen of Boston University.

"That is a surprising finding, considering the general notion of land degradation in populous countries from over exploitation," he said.

The study published on February 11, in the journal Nature Sustainability said that recent satellite data (2000-2017) reveal a greening pattern that is strikingly prominent in China and India and overlaps with croplands worldwide.

China alone accounts for 25% of the global net increase in leaf area with only 6.6% of global vegetated area.

The greening in China is from forests (42%) and croplands (32%), but in India it is mostly from croplands (82%) with minor contribution from forests (4.4%), the NASA study said.

China is engineering ambitious programmes to conserve and expand forests with the goal of mitigating land degradation, air pollution and climate change.

Flood production in China and India has increased by over 35% since 2000 mostly owing to an increase in harvested area through multiple cropping facilitated by fertiliser use and surface-and/or groundwater irrigation.

"When the greening of the Earth was first observed, we thought it was due to a warmer, wetter climate and fertilisation from the added carbon dioxide in the atmosphere," said Rama Nemani, a research scientist at NASA's Ames Research Centre and a co-author of the study.

This study was made possible thanks to a two-decade-long data record from the Moderate Resolution Imaging Spectroradiometer (MODIS) instruments on NASA's Terra and Aqua satellites.

"Now with the MODIS data, we see that humans are also contributing," she said.

Observing that once people realise there is a problem, they tend to fix it, Nemani said in the 1970s and 80s in India and China, the situation around vegetation loss was not good.

"In the 1990s, people realised it, and today things have improved. Humans are incredibly resilient. That's what we see in the satellite data," she said.

According to the paper, how the greening trend may change in the future depends on numerous factors.

For example, increased food production in India is facilitated by groundwater irrigation.

If the groundwater is depleted, this trend may change, it said.

The researchers also pointed out that the gain in greening around the world does not necessarily offset the loss of natural vegetation in tropical regions such as Brazil and Indonesia.

There are consequences for sustainability and biodiversity in those ecosystems beyond the simple greenness of the landscape, the research study said. —PTI
